LAW REPORT

The Jerusalem Post August 19, 1968

In the Supreme Court

Sitting as Court of Civil Appeals

Before Justices Silberg, Ben-Zion and Wilkowitz. Anitza Konrad and Yvonne van Gelder, Appellants, v. Dr. G. Herlitz & Others, Respondents (C.A. 288/67).

District Court May Confirm Civil and Jewish Will

The Justice then considered the appellants' arguments with regard to the validity, in accordance with Jewish law, of the original will and the subsequent deletions. He was not prepared to accept the argument that certain deletions had not been accompanied by the correct form of "kinyan".

The deceased's will, according to the appellants, was a Jewish law and later deleted two and a half million shekels from it. By so doing he deleted the law of the will.

After Dr. Levi's death, the appellants argued, the will was altered. The appellants argued that the will was altered. The appellants argued that the will was altered.

JUDGMENT

Justice Silberg, with whom Justices Ben-Zion and Wilkowitz concurred, had only one fault to find with Judge Sherevsky's decision. It is a well-established principle of Israeli law, he said, that if a will is found to be invalid, it is null and void.

Mr. Leon Rauschwerger, an attorney for Kfar Batya, recalled that Dr. Sachs, who has textile holdings in the U.S. and Israel had not only provided the looms, but had also supplied with raw materials and spare parts during periods of greatest shortage.

Briscoe is First Jewish Lord Mayor in Dublin's History

During periods of stability, government in a democracy is carried on by groups rather than by individuals.

The Leader comes into his own only during an emergency, and he disappears with it. Power resides in a committee rather than in a person, and the result, as some see it, that politics have become demagogic.

To these people this is the most regrettable aspect of the direct intervention in local government of the major political groups. Municipal affairs, they argue, have been handed over to the professionals; municipal offices, including the very highest, have become demagogic.

The present Lord Mayor of Dublin, Councillor T.D. Briscoe, is at once a confirmation of this theory and the refutation of it. He has been in politics since 1926, was a founder of the Fianna Fail movement, and has presented it consistently in the House of Commons.

He is widely recognized as a good party man, a hard-working, loyal and a forceful speaker. By virtue of his services and of his experience he was the man to lead the Fianna Fail group of Councillors now he finds himself in the Mansion House.

All this, though true, enough, overlooks one essential fact. Briscoe is undoubtedly a good party man, but he is also a man who has a sense of duty and a sense of responsibility.

He is the first Jewish Lord Mayor in the history of Dublin. For many this fact could become a fixation, but with Briscoe it is important; merely as tangible proof that Ireland enjoys a happy freedom from racial discrimination.

His ancestry, however, may have much to do with his own singleness of mind, and with the intimate relationship for him between duty and idea. What he believes in, he will strive for to the utmost.

It is easy and natural to think of him deeply involved in a movement like the fight for Irish or Israel independence. It is easy, too, to see him fighting unemployment as though it were an acute physical discomfort to him personally. It is impossible, on the other hand, to conceive of him pursuing anything solely for his material advantage. He is a striking phenomenon, a highly disciplined, revolutionary and a practical idealist; a party man, but an integrated individual.

Many Visit Israel Destroyers Off T.A.

TEL AVIV, Saturday. - Be-Flagged launches kept up a continuous shuttle service to the sleek destroyers Yaf and Elit, anchored off the port.

On the second day of the destroyers' visit on Thursday, hundreds of army personnel went out to see the latest addition to the Israeli Navy.

The 35-year-old commander of the two destroyers declared that his crews were mostly out at sea on long stretches for grueling training. They are the strength of the navy, because the human element was especially important in modern destroyers, where technical skill and personal initiative are required.

The Yaf and Elit are fitted out with the latest equipment and they could stand up to any other destroyer. He pointed out that the Egyptian destroyers observed that his crews were in the same class as the two Israeli warships.

The commander said that he had a good idea of keeping ships in Britain for the initial training period, as well as adjustments were found necessary. The Egyptians did not do likewise and will probably regret it in Alexandria.

He said that British navy men were impressed by the speed with which the Israeli destroyer crew took over.

Constantly interrupted by messages over loudspeakers, the young commander spoke in glowing terms of his crew. It would be better still if all of the men were regulars, he said. In the British navy, practically all men aboard were regulars. Here, after two and a half years of service, navy men were tempted by higher pay offered by the merchant marine which was eager to take well-trained and disciplined men. However, a substantial number of men had signed on, he said, adding that the new boats were certainly boosting the morale of the Navy.

THE COTTON crop in the Sharon Plains is coming on well and is free of the pest which attacked the cotton in other areas. Preparations are going ahead for the picking, which is expected to start at the beginning of next month.
